"Green New World."

"I have seen the future, Malcolm.
Imagine a Green Jackboot, stamping on a human face,
forever."

With acknowledgment and apologies to George Orwell, and "1984".

1. Green New World still Threatens

Firstly, Climate Realists have won a big and symbolic victory in Canberra with the rejection by the Australian Senate of the Turnbull/Rudd Ration-N-Tax Scheme.

Who won this victory? Victory has many parents, while defeat is an orphan. Many people helped. Malcolm Turnbull helped by advertising his dedication to philosophies and principles not supported by Liberal members and voters. Dedicated and principled politicians like Steve Fielding, Barnaby Joyce, Dennis Jensen, Cory Bernardi, Nick Minchin and many others turned the tide in parliament. Kevin Andrews and Tony Abbott recognised that decisive action was needed to save the Liberal Party. Seeds sown over years by "Carbon Sense", the Climate Sceptics, most of the minor political parties and many others suddenly sprouted. Then the Climategate excrement hit the fan and suddenly the media discovered that the "Global Warming Consensus" was dead. The internet ran so hot that even the government media was forced to notice.

Dramatically, the Liberal Party split, Turnbull was deposed and the Ration-N-Tax Scheme was rejected.

However, this is just one battle in a continuing war. Rudd will reintroduce the Rudd/Turnbull bill in January and the Ruddites and Turnbullites will support it. There is still a grave danger that enough watermelon liberal senators will defect to see it passed. A major effort is required by us in January.

Thanks to all those who have sent messages of appreciation to the Carbon Sense Coalition – so many, in fact, that many of them have not received an answer and our inbox is still overflowing. We read them all, but please forgive us if we do not answer them all.

We have been truly encouraged by the number and tone of these messages. Here are a few examples:

*Hi Viv,
Congratulations to you and everyone else involved in Australia for the stunning ETS turnaround this week.*

I've been checking out readers' replies to articles and comments from pro-AGW journalists and columnists ... and even bloggers and on Facebook.

It has been astonishing the change in discussion. It's as if Climategate disclosures and change in LP leadership suddenly emboldened half the population.

Every statement is met by an avalanche of counter opinion, a lot of which is quite well-informed.

Even on significant leftwing sites like Huffington Post, New Statemen, Nation, New Matilda.

There's finally a real debate going on and it will force more transparency from the climate scientists.

*Cheers,
Geoffrey (Jakarta)*

You guys (Ray Evans and Viv Forbes) have been doing a wonderful job.

I am continuing to circulate your stuff, plus some words of my own.

*God bless you both!
Mark (Adelaide).*

*Dear Viv.
Just a note to say how grateful I am to you, and all those others who have fought this climate change battle. I know this isn't the end of the problem. Unfortunately...there's still a way to go. But to have got rid of the dangerous, straight out of Goldman Sachs, Malcolm Turnbull is a wonderful and quite amazing feat, when all is said and done.*

You brave and very informed fighters have won the first battle. This gives courage to others and more heart to those who continue the fight.

Good on you, and may all our efforts continue to be winning ones!

*Regards,
Margaret (Queensland).*

Viv Forbes is hereby awarded the VF medal for serving Australia way beyond the metal of normal citizens.

The Victory Fellow Medal is rarely issued as people worthy of them are rare. It is a pleasure to know you Viv and I will not be the last to thank you and congratulate you on your fantastic achievement.

James (Gold Coast)

2. Our Imperfect Allies – Choose the Least Worst

In the excitement of the Liberal Party upheaval and the victory of Tony Abbott, many believed that the war was over, that we can all go back to the beach or the farm, and that life will be good again.

I have never believed that. The battle that started with Plato and Aristotle will never end. In essence it is always a battle between collectivism and freedom, between centralisation and diversification, between central planning and decentralised planning, between state enterprise and private enterprise, between high taxes and low taxes, between democracy and dictatorship. Remember the great Russian, Solzhenitsyn, who observed:

“Democracies are Islands in the immense river of history. The water is always rising.”

If we fight hard we will gain enough space, freedom and prosperity for our grandchildren to live full lives. Then they will have to fight another battle on another issue. The water is always rising.

Despite the great result in the Senate, some of our supporters are disheartened by the fact that the hopes engendered by the Abbott victory have been dashed already by his backpedalling on whether humans cause global warming, and by the retention of alarmists and green energy incompetents in his shadow cabinet.

We need to remember that the world is not black and white. It is black and dirty grey, and we must always choose the least worst option. To defeat Nazism in the 1940's we were forced to tolerate an alliance with Bolshevism. It may even be that to defeat the ETS we may need the support of some Greens who are unhappy with “Wong Lite”.

Accept any ally but maintain your own integrity and consistency.

We need to use any legal tactic and accept any ally to stall for time. We need time for the growing public anger, concern and scepticism to spread; time for the realities of natural climate change to be asserted; and time for the real costs and dangers of the Ration-N-Tax Scheme to become obvious.

Make no mistake. Once any form of an emissions trading scheme weasels its way onto the law books, there will immediately be created fake paper assets in Emission Permits and Offset Credits, as well as a huge vested interest industry trading credits and benefitting from scams like the renewable energy mandates. The power of these concentrated vested interests in resisting repeal of their legislative protection racket will always defeat the diffuse and decentralised voices of the consumers, tax payers and shareholders who will pay the bills.

We may not be offered the choice between an ETS or no ETS. For example, we may face the choice of supporting an ETS or an increased carbon tax (we already have substantial carbon taxes on coal and oil). In that case, a carbon tax surcharge may be the least worst option, mainly because it is the most honest, has the fewest side effects, and will be the easiest to root out later. All are bad but some are more bad than others.

We are not responsible for the integrity or consistency of our allies. Make sure we maintain our own integrity and logic, but choose and support the least worst option and oppose and expose the worst option.

3. Green Hypocrites Flock to Copenhagen. They should all WALK HOME.

Right now, over 15,000 green hypocrites, mostly funded by suffering taxpayers, have winged their way in comfortable carbon-fuelled air travel to Copenhagen's best VIP accommodation. There they will be seeking ways to forcibly reduce our carbon footprint while inflating theirs.

Top rated airlines are booming as important people top up their frequent flyer carbon credits. Concierges are smiling as limousines glide in, full of important people with their entourage of minders, media and courtiers. Lights are blazing, air conditioners humming, kitchens cooking, champagne bubbling and caviar disappearing. The Global Warming Industry will also be there, creating scares, drowning polar bears, melting ice, generating publicity, demanding handouts, seeking exemptions, defending paper credits, and pushing for subsidies and special deals. And of course we will have battalions of largely gullible and fawning media, many also touring on the tab of the tax payers.

There is no way that 15,000 people will draft an agreement. That will be drafted in a back room. Right now the Evil Empire exposed by Climategate will be secretly plotting how to snatch victory from the jaws of defeat in Copenhagen.

For the full story of the Green Hypocrites swamping Copenhagen see:

<http://www.telegraph.co.uk/earth/copenhagen-climate-change-confe/6736517/Copenhagen-climate-summit-1200-limos-140-private-planes-and-caviar-wedges.html>

Here is our suggestion to the Gallivanting Green Geese of Copenhagen –

“Use green energy and WALK HOME.”

4. Reducing Carbon Footprints – Trim Government

Every day governments exhort us to cut our consumption of everything.

Let them practice what they preach.

For a start let us see all overseas travel by politicians banned, and all public servant travel stopped. Maybe readers can suggest other ways in which our governments can cut their unproductive carbon footprint.

For ourselves, we will seek to reduce the income, activities and consumption of every government owned or controlled body we deal with. Trim them all.

In this festive season, we intend to start with the government owned Australia Post. We will be sending no cards to anyone. Instead we ask you to make "The Twelve Days of Global Warming" the top of the charts in Copenhagen. Email the link below to everyone on your festive list. Listen now, you will enjoy it:

5. Be prepared for more episodes of the tear-jerking soapie "A Scare a Day"

Australians have been battered recently by a planned program of "scare-a-day" climate doom forecasts, especially during the period while the Senate was re-considering the Ration-N-Tax Scheme. A new episode will run during the Copenhagen Carnival.

Presumably this ploy will resume in January 2010, prior to Mr Rudd's third attempt to coerce the Senate to pass his friendless Ration-N-Tax Scheme.

We have been threatened with prophecies of dire climate catastrophes such as droughts, floods, heat waves, bush fires, rising sea level, loss of the Barrier Reef and extinction of the pygmy glider. In the latest scare-mongering, the government's ABC gave generous airplay to dire predictions that global warming will cause migrations and wars.

Any Australian politician or official claiming that a miniscule increase in the amount of an invisible trace gas in the atmosphere will produce climate doom should be asked to show us the evidence or proof of his irrational beliefs.

Such proof should normally come from CSIRO, the government science adviser. However, the recent revelations that CSIRO has been involved in suppressing dissent about the ETS from within its own ranks suggest that CSIRO is being driven by political agendas rather than science.

CSIRO has a long record of good and useful science. However, unless it can produce data, evidence and proof to support the government climate scare forecasts, we are forced to conclude that it too has abandoned objective science for political advocacy.

6. Who is adjusting Australian Temperature Records? Which ones and why?

We have already discovered that many rural temperature records in Australia show no increases for about 100 years. See:

<http://carbon-sense.com/2009/08/15/isolated-australian-temperatures/>

The increases occur in big cities and are caused not by a trace amount of invisible gas in the atmosphere, but by millions of warm blooded human beings with their heat producing stoves, vehicles and machines.

Climategate alerted us to the fact that the Global Warming Priesthood has been adjusting and manipulating the data. Surprise, surprise, most of the adjustments result in creating the appearance of more warming. New Zealand has discovered unexplained heating adjustments. And now Australia is in the spotlight.

Look at the state of temperature records for Darwin.

7. What do we do now?

The Alarmists running Climategate and the vested interests supporting them will never surrender, so they must be destroyed.

There are four battlefields:

- The Science – this is what no one wants to discuss, because it is their area of greatest weakness. But it is the key. Insisting on truth in science and real evidence will destroy the whole basis for any action on innocent carbon dioxide.
- The Philosophy – do we support a free decentralised society or do we want to live in a world run out of Brussels/Delhi/Washington which demands taxes on everything we do, and controls on every aspect of our lives.
- The Costs and Unexpected Consequences. This whole scam will do nothing for the environment or energy conservation, but will make all of our lives less secure, less prosperous, and more boring.
- The Policies. This is easy. Humans have not and cannot control the climate; neither can an ETS or a carbon tax. Let us look after the environment, make sure prices are allowed to ration scarce resources, abolish all the wasteful green subsidies, defend consumers, workers, taxpayers and shareholders and ignore all the screams from bankers, brokers, vested interests and the Climate Change gravy train.

We cannot do everything at once, but every one of us can do something at once. Politics is a numbers game, so every one of us must be looking outward into the electorate. No good battering the same people week after week. We must all seek new disciples. Keep sowing the seeds.

Best wishes for the Festive Season and 2010.

Politically and climatically, 2010 is not shaping up well.

The politics is very shaky. No one wants to challenge the very basis of the Global Warming Scam. Far too many are all geared up to seek unearned profits at our expense.

The weather for 2010 will do what it always does – it will vary.

The quiet sun suggests we are in for colder weather. The sunspot cycle suggests drought for the Southern hemisphere at least. But if El Nino continues, it may bring temporary heat and drought.

And if Al Gore visits, we are certain to get snow and blizzards.

8. Back to “Green Jackboots” – Isn’t that a Bit extreme, Viv?

Finally, for those who may think our Green Jackboots quote is a bit unlikely, have a look at this:

<http://www.prisonplanet.com/shocking-un-document-divulges-climate-cult-brainwashing.html>

"This document represents yet another smoking gun proving that the climate cult movement is all about expanding the power of a dictatorial, unelected global government, diluting powers of nation states, seizing control of the global economy, eviscerating the middle class with a raft of new regulations and laws, and shutting down industry with impossible CO₂ reduction mandates, while erecting environmentalism, which is really a thin veil for global fascism, as the new universal religion.

This has nothing to do with saving the earth and, as the Climategate scandal has illustrated, nothing to do with the real science – but everything to do with a relatively small clique of globalists running roughshod over humanity itself in pursuit of their Malthusian control freak agenda."

Remember the cruel and sadistic zeal of the Mao's Red Guards and the Hitler Brown Shirts.

Gore's Green Guards are coming.
